

Why is organic food important in our daily lives?

The demand for healthy food has risen dramatically in recent years. The way we eat has changed significantly since the introduction of Covid-19, which has resulted in a wide range of behavioral shifts. It has become more apparent that food has a significant influence on our health, which has prompted us to rethink our relationship with food.

There are many alternatives for consumers to choose from for eating safe, nutritious, and healthy food, and organic food has typically taken the top rank. You may improve your health by including organic food in your diet, so let's look at some of the reasons why.

1. Improved general health and well-being organic food

To ensure the safety and health of the yields, organic items are grown utilizing procedures like green manure and crop rotation. As a result, those who eat organic vegetables enjoy better nutrition, more excellent health, and a higher quality of life.

Antioxidants, particularly those derived from organic food, have been shown to significantly impact general health. Due to the absence of foreign chemicals, organic foods have a higher concentration of antioxidants.

2. Improved taste

Compared to conventionally cultivated food, organically grown food frequently has a more incredible flavor. Organic farm food is often regarded to taste better and be healthier since it is grown without pesticides. Antioxidants have a positive effect on flavor, fragrance, and mouthfeel.

Food that is manufactured with chemicals, on the other hand, has a lower quality, which affects the product's flavor.

3. Improved Immunity

It is common for farmers to use large quantities of insecticides and pesticides because of the conventional and industrial techniques of food production's focus on increasing the amount of food produced at the fastest possible pace. Although such technologies boost production, it is impossible to ignore the long-term consequences of their use.

There's a good likelihood that individuals who eat food that's been heavily processed with chemicals will have weakened immune systems as a result. The danger of reducing the immune system may be avoided by eating organic food, which is cultivated without being c hanged, is of superior quality, and is filled with numerous vitamins and minerals.

4. Ecologically friendly

No toxic chemicals are used to cultivate organic food. Thus it causes little or no damage to the environment. As a result of organic agricultural practices, there is no risk of long-term health risks due to air, water, or soil contamination. As demand for organic goods grows, the danger of increased pollution decreases, resulting in a cleaner environment and a higher quality of life.

Organic food vs normal food

The organic versus non-organic food debate has long been a source of controversy. What you need to know about both kinds of labels and the advantages/disadvantages they bring to the (kitchen) table are here.

When it comes to organic and non-organic food, what is the difference?

There isn't much of a distinction between the two at the fundamental level. They have a lot in common, including their appearance and flavor. In general, organic and non-organic foods have the same quantity of nutrients, vitamins, and minerals.

It is mandatory for a food product to be branded organic to have been verified and approved by the Department of food & Agriculture. Organic foods often include fewer chemicals, fewer microorganisms that are resistant to several antibiotics, and no food that has been genetically engineered.

Are there advantages and disadvantages to organic or non-organic food?

Non-organic foods have a greater environmental effect than organic ones when it comes to how they're grown and processed. Additionally, organic foods do not have any extra antibiotics, hormones, or synthetic ingredients, making them healthier.

Depending on the product and the season, you should expect to pay a higher price for organic food, although this might vary widely. As a potential drawback of purchasing organic, you'll have to wait till the product is in a season before you can get your hands on it.

What causes organic food to be more costly than normal food?

Organic food is more labor-intensive to produce since it is grown without the use of synthetic pesticides, chemical fertilizers, or pharmaceuticals. Organic certification is costly, and organic feed for animals may be twice as expensive as conventional feed. Organic farms are often smaller in size than conventional farms, which implies that fixed expenses and overhead must be spread over lower product quantities in order to be profitable without the assistance of the government.

Our Organic Cow Ghee Vs Normal Ghee

About us page:

● Message from the Founder:

We are the 100% Organic Store in India. These days, when you buy anything from the market, there is a high chance that you will get products that come with harmful chemicals. Multinational companies use chemicals even in the honey that our children use. So, we came up with the idea of giving you all a 100% Organic and Natural store

1. We provide raw honeycombs directly picked and packed in bottles. You can extract the nectar by squeezing it.

2. When we prepare Organic Ghee, the milk we collect is tested in the lab if the cow is fed proper grass with all the nutrients. We use the old hand-churned Bilona process to prepare ghee so that you get the best quality out of the milk.

We recommend using our 100% Organic products for at least one year. You will start seeing benefits from the second month of your use for the jaggery and ghee. We are very confident that you will continue to get the best experience from us.

● How we pack and process our 100% Organic products:

1. Collecting the Raw materials: We have a highly experienced team who collects the best raw materials directly from the farmers,

2. Processing: Processing is entirely hand churn, and no heavy machinery is ever used to process and extract the products. This ensures that no chemicals or preservatives are mixed.

3. Packing: We use environmentally friendly glass containers to pack and deliver all our products.

4. Delivery: When you order any product from our organic store, you can expect delivery between 7 to 10 days, according to your pin.

5. From farm to directly delivered at your home: We ensure that the products you shop from our organic store have their whole natural essence when you use them. Our quality helps us to build a long-term relationship with you.
